Palestinians list delegates amid threats

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Palestinian leaders Tuesday announced a list of 14 delegates from the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip who will participate in next week's peace talks in Madrid, Spain.

But the announcement, following seven months of difficult negotiations over the Palestinian role in the peace process, was marred by threats issued by radicals against those who will travel to the conference.

Faisal Husseini, a leading nationalist figure, said at a news conference in Arab East Jerusalem: that the Palestinian team would include a seven-member "guidance committee" besides the negotiating group.

The guidance team is to include Husseini and other residents of East Jerusalem, as well as representatives of Palestinians living outside Israel and the occupied territories.

The two-pronged approach appeared to satisfy Israeli demands that the actual negotiators must not belong to the Palestine Liberation Organization or come from East Jerusalem, which Israel considers its own sovereign territory.

Husseini and Hanan Ashrawi, who led talks with Secretary of State James Baker, were disqualified from being on the negotiating team because they are from East Jerusalem, but the play a major role in the negotiating process by serving on the guidance committee.

Haider Abdel-Shafi, who will lead the negotiating team in Madrid, said the Palestinians "are going to the peace conference with open minds and hearts to participate in making a just and stable peace. The delegation will not leave any opening that is promising progress towards peace without exploring it."

Two radical Palestinians who oppose the peace talks said they would turn the lives of the the Palestinian negotiators into "hell."

Earlier in the day, two radical leaders opposed to the peace talks, said they would turn the lives of the Palestinian negotiators into "hell."

300 students get pink slips

Notices sent out to workers without financial forms on file

By John C. Patterson
Special Assignment Writer

The University has slipped about 300 student workers the pink for not meeting financial aid form deadlines.

Employment termination notices were sent Oct. 18 for student workers who did not have a financial aid application on file.

Although there is no clear way of verifying the number of students affected, Financial Aid Director Pamela Britton said as many as 300 of the more than 6,000 student employees at SIUC may lose their jobs.

Every year students receive a new work referral form and are notified they must have a financial aid application on file and should do so immediately if they do not, Britton said.

This year the University has adopted new forms requiring no application fee that are easier to complete, she said.

After filling out the application, students then must mail the form to be processed. Once the information comes back to the student, the final processing is done by Financial Aid.

Students, however, must wait for the process to be completed, a process that cost many of them their jobs.

"I've only got one semester left and since I didn't get any (financial aid) before, I didn't think I had to apply," Lucy Hofer, advertising

U.S. gets failing grade from health care study

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States finished last in a comparison of health care systems in the top 10 industrialized nations, researchers said Tuesday.

The 10 nations were ranked based on the extent of their primary health care system, the overall satisfaction of the population and 12 "health indicators" such as infant mortality, life expectancy and death rates according to age.

"Ratings for the United States were low on all three measures. West Germany also had low ratings. Canada, Sweden and the Netherlands had generally high ratings," said Dr. Barbara Starfield, of The Johns Hopkins School of Public Health in Baltimore.

The study was based on data collected during the middle to late 1980s from sources including the World Health Organization, the U.S. National Center for Health Statistics and the Centers for Disease Control.

The United States ranked near the bottom in seven of the 12 health indicators, the study said, but was in the top third for life expectancy.

"At the very least, the findings of this study should indicate the need for consideration of both health levels and the adequacy of the primary care sector when competing systems are debated as possible models for this country,"

Panel denies plan to preserve legislative district

By Doug Toole
Politics Writer

The three-judge panel redesigning Illinois federal legislative districts rejected a measure that would have preserved most of the 22nd Congressional District in Southern Illinois.

The panel denied a motion co-filed by an SIUC law professor that would have guaranteed the majority of Southern Illinois counties be kept together, regardless of the way the legislative maps are drawn.

William Schroeder and Marion attorney Brocton Lockwood filed a motion to intervene with the U.S. District Court in Chicago Oct. 16 to prevent the southernmost area in Illinois from being split down the middle.

The panel denied the motion to intervene Monday as being untimely because the deadline to file such a motion was Aug. 28.

Schroeder disagreed with this, saying there was no reason for Southern Illinois residents to want to intervene until they saw the Republican redistricting proposal, which was submitted Sept. 20 and revised Oct. 3.

Schroeder said the panel's decision could be appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court and he is considering an appeal.

Legislative redistricting occurs every 10 years to reflect changes in population. Because the Illinois General Assembly was unable to compromise on a redistricting map, a panel of federal judges was selected to design a new map.

Both the Democratic and Republican parties submitted map proposals to the panel for consideration. The Republican plan

Ex-Cardinal Pendleton top NL third sacker

NEW YORK (UPI) — Unlike the Minnesota Twins, who pride themselves on having a new hero every day, the Atlanta Braves have plenty of showcase talent.

They proved it Tuesday when they placed three players on the United Press International's NL All-Star squad.

Third baseman Terry Pendleton, outfielder Ron Gant and left-handed pitcher Tom Glavine were selected to the team in a voting conducted among UPI baseball correspondents from each major league city.

Pendleton and Glavine were runaway winners at their positions.

Pendleton easily outdistanced Chris Sabo of the Cincinnati Reds and Matt Williams of the San Francisco Giants while Glavine received all but one vote in the balloting for left-handed pitcher. Pittsburgh's John Smiley received the other.

Gant secured the third outfield spot in a tight battle with New York's Howard Johnson. Because he played three positions during the season, Johnson did not receive enough votes at any of the three to make the team despite leading the league in home runs (38) and RBI (117).

Rounding out the NL squad were first baseman Will Clark of San Francisco, second baseman Ryne Sandberg of Chicago, shortstop Barry Larkin of Cincinnati, catcher Benito Santiago of San Diego, outfielders Barry Bonds and Bobby Bonilla of Pittsburgh, right-handed pitcher Jose Rijo of Cincinnati and relief pitcher Lee Smith of St. Louis. Sandberg was the only unanimous choice at his position.

Sandberg, Larkin, Bonds and Bonilla are repeat selections from a year ago.

Clark easily beat out San Diego's Fred McGriff for the first base position and Larkin was an

Simpson gets hat trick as top Gateway spiker

Lori Simpson

The Gateway Conference has selected only eight volleyball Players of the Week. For the fifth time this season, a Saluki spiker has received the honor.

Senior outside hitter Lori Simpson was named Player of the Week Tuesday for the third time in 1991.

Junior middle blocker Dana Olden also has been selected twice.

The five-foot-10-inch Simpson was the leading force behind the Salukis in their first two conference contests against Wichita State and Southwest Missouri State. She averaged 22 kills, 18 digs and two service aces a match.

SIUC, 10-12, split the matches, winning against Wichita and falling to defending Gateway champ SMSU. Its league record stands at 1-1.

In Gateway statistics, Simpson ranks No. 2 in kills with 776 and digs with 770 and No. 5 in attack percentage with .265.

With her number of digs (770), she surpassed SIUC's only volleyball All-American coach Sonya Locke on the all-time list to take the No. 5 position.

Simpson said after receiving the award twice, she didn't expect it again.

"I was surprised the second time, but the award reflects on the entire team," she said.

"I couldn't have won it without the team playing behind me. Dana has been selected twice and this is my third time. It shows we are a consistent team week after week."

Locke said it is not a surprise to any of the coaches or players Simpson has been recognized three times.

"It is a pure indicator of the consistency Lori has shown all season," she said.

By Todd Eschman
Sports Writer

The SIUC Scuba Club provides training, practice and affordability for students who want to dive into the joy of underwater exploration.

The club, which meets at 6 p.m. every Wednesday in Pulliam 021, is open to certified divers at SIUC. A $7 yearly fee entitles participants to reasonable equipment rental, use of the Pulliam swimming pool and lake facilities in Pickneyville, training and scuba information.

Scuba Club adviser Pete Carroll said the main purpose of the club is to promote economic scuba diving.

"Diving is an expensive sport," Carroll said. "Equipment costs about the same amount as ski equipment—which is pretty expensive."

Club president Eric Hobbie said the club relieves the financial burden of scuba diving by providing quality equipment at low rental prices.

"Scuba gear is really expensive. It can cost more than $1,000 to get completely outfitted," Hobbie said. "We buy good equipment and then rent it out really cheap—$1 for a piece of equipment. It costs a lot more at a diving shop."

Hobbie, a senior from Hillsboro, said most of the club's members are enrolled in a scuba class at SIUC.

He said the club tries to give additional information and encourage interest in diving through lectures by guest speakers and additional training.

NFL owners expected to give WLAF year off

GRAPEVINE, Texas (UPI) — NFL owners gather Wednesday at their home away from home—the Dallas-Fort Worth airport—for their annual midseason meeting, during which they are expected to tell the World League of American Football to take a year off.

The immediate future of the WLAF will be one of several items on the agenda, one that includes a review of the contract proposals that league officials are about to present to representatives of the players.

The meetings could last through Thursday afternoon, although the business could be wrapped up by Wednesday night.

First on the agenda will be the WLAF, which was created in 10 American and European cities last spring. A vote is expected to be taken and reported by midday Wednesday.

The vote will be whether to press on with the league next year or cancel the 1992 campaign with the purpose of resuming the following year.

"From my perspective," said Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones, "we need to create a format that would allow players who have name recognition to participate in the World League. We may not have time to work that out (before the next season)."

"It's not a question of whether the ownership is behind the league. That is not the issue. The NFL is totally behind the league. But there is a question of whether we will take a year's hiatus."

The chief reason for the league's existence in the first place was to enhance the possible future expansion of pro football outside North America. But while they are doing that, the owners are hesitant to pour money down the drain if some benefits are not coming in.

And Jones, along with other owners, saw few benefits from the WLAF in the United States, especially since they each paid between $700,000 and $1.2 million into the new league.

Commissioner Paul Tagliabue and Executive Vice President for Labor Relations Harold Henderson will also brief the owners on the contract proposals that will soon be made to representatives of the players.

INDIA QUAKE DEATH TOLL RISES — Military helicopters landed rescue teams and dropped tons of relief supplies to earthquake-devastated areas of northwest India Tuesday amid reports that the death toll from the temblor has risen to 785 and is expected to continue to climb. A government official said 784 people were killed in landslides and house collapses in Uttar Pradesh state near the epicenter of the quake. One person died in neighboring Himachal Pradesh state.

SERBIAN FORCES SHELL CROATIAN TOWN — Serbian forces intensified attacks Tuesday on Vukovar, hurling more than 500 shells into the Croatian town, but failing to break through in a major infantry thrust, state-run Radio Croatia said. Heavy fighting also was reported about 10 miles south of the Adriatic Sea resort of Dubrovnik, from which more than 800 residents have been evacuated in the past two days by ferry, the radio said.

SCIENTIST: PAKISTAN A NUCLEAR POWER — The government declined to comment Tuesday on a statement by the country's top nuclear scientist that Pakistan has not built a nuclear weapon but that it has the capability to do so. "Whether anyone believes it or not, it is a fact that Pakistan has become a nuclear power," Dr. Abdul Qadir Khan, head of the nuclear research facility in the eastern city of Kahuta, said in a speech Monday night to industrialists in the southern city of Karachi.

FIREFIGHTERS SNUFF CALIFORNIA BLAZE — About 1,000 firefighters who had joined to battle the single most destructive fire in California history returned home Tuesday. The blaze erupted Sunday and raged through the picturesque and pricey hillside overlooking the bay, killing at least 14 people and destroying neighborhoods the way bombs destroy cities. By Tuesday morning the blaze was virtually out, although some "hot spots" remained.

SENATE CONSIDERS CIVIL RIGHTS BILL — Unable to reach a compromise with the White House after months of negotiations, the Senate Tuesday began consideration of a civil rights bill supporters hope can attract enough votes to override a promised veto by President Bush. In the first step, the Senate voted 93-4 to end an incipient filibuster against bringing up the bill for action. Formal debate on the legislation is expected to start Wednesday, although it could be delayed.

BANK ADMITS TO FINANCING IRAN ARMS SALE — The scandal-ridden Bank of Credit and Commerce International financed the Reagan administration's secret sale of arms to Iran for profit, but investigators later covered up the bank's role, a former bank official testified Tuesday. Abdur Sakha told a Senate subcommittee that when he was in charge of U.S. operations for BCCI in 1987, FBI investigators asked him for bank records about the arms deal.

BURRIS FILES CONSUMER LOAN FRAUD SUITS — Attorney General Roland Burris Tuesday filed 10 suits against companies that promise, but fail to deliver, "guaranteed" consumer loans. Burris said 50 consumers from 21 counties complained to his office about the "loan broker" operations, which charge an application fee. "This type of fraud victimizes those who can least afford it," Burris told a news conference at his Champaign regional office.

Candidate for coroner quits, cites unpleasant side of job

By Rob Neff
Police Writer

SIUC Security Director said he was pushed into the race for Jackson County Coroner—now he's pushing back.

Robert Harris withdrew his candidacy for coroner Monday, a decision he said he has been considering for a while.

"Would you like to be coroner?" he said. "Would you like to be called at 3 in the morning to come look at some dead bodies that have been burned to a crisp in a car wreck? Day after day I asked myself 'Do you really want this,' and day after day the answer was 'no.'"

The additional money he would have received from the job would have been a welcome addition to the income from his pension, but the money does not outweigh the unpleasant aspects of the job, Harris said.

With that decision made, Harris confronted another problem.

"I didn't want it when I was asked," he said. "I was asked again

"Would you like to ... come look at some dead bodies that have been burned to a crisp in a car wreck?"

—Robert Harris

and again, so I said 'OK.'"

Harris' decision to drop out of the race leaves Carbondale physician Jerry Thurman as the sole candidate seeking the Democratic nomination. James M. Houseworth, a dentist from Carbondale, is seeking the Republican nomination.

Harris planned to retire sometime during the summer before the election next fall.

but his future plans are not as clear now, he said.

"I'm going to take some time to think about it," he said. "But I'm not going to be a coroner."

Learning more than fun and games in recreation

By Christiann Baxter
Administration Writer

Nathan Barnhart may be a recreation major, but he is learning more than how to play sports.

Barnhart, a sophomore from Olney, said he learns leadership skills and the history of recreation in his classes. He hopes to have a career as a recreation facility coordinator when he graduates.

John Allen, chair of the SIUC Department of Recreation, said recreation often is misunderstood.

Many people confuse recreation with physical education.

"Students in particular think we do activities and train people to head games," he said.

Recreation professor Doug McEwen agreed that recreation is confused with other fields.

"People traditionally have put physical education, recreation and health education together," he said.

Sports are included in recreation, but so are a number of other activities such as listening to music, eating and light reading, McEwen said.

Recreation is gaining popularity as a major at SIUC. The department's enrollment has doubled in the last five years, reaching its current level of 240.

Allen said the influx of recreation students is the result of an increasing desire among college students to help others.

Five years ago students were more concerned with making money than in improving society, Allen said.

Allen said a wide variety of job opportunities are available in recreation.

Park districts, hospitals, correction facilities, the military and resorts use recreation professionals to coordinate recreation programs.

Kevin Kendrigan, a 1971 SIUC graduate of the Department of Recreation, is the director of the Northwest Special Recreation Association in Rolling Meadows. The NSPRA provides recreation services for the mentally and physically disabled.

The recreation field is full of job opportunities, Kendrigan said.

Many recreation professionals will retire in the next five to 10 years, he said.

"The field has gone through 20 to 25 years of growth and maturity," Kendrigan said. "It's a very good time to get a recreation degree."

The recreation department teaches students administration, management and operational skills necessary for the operation of recreation facilities.

Leaky Congress has mixed-up priorities

THE CLARENCE THOMAS confirmation hearings confirmed what we've known all along—Congress is full of holes.

After all, someone did leak Anita Hill's confidential and controversial sexual harassment charges to the press. It was probably some desperate Democrat hoping to save the world from Thomas.

Well, it didn't work. Thomas got confirmed. Hill got humiliated. The public got a four-day-long real-life soap opera to watch on national television. And Congress got suspicious.

Now our fearless legislators will not let this who-dunnit mystery linger on.

MAYBE IT WAS TED KENNEDY. After all, he was a little too quiet during the confirmation process. Maybe it was Orrin Hatch who may not have been in his right mind after too many late hours reading "The Exorcist."

Or maybe it was just the butler.

Although the leaders of the Senate Judiciary Committee along with the FBI are launching an investigation, it is doubtful they will ever find the "perpetrator."

But that will not stop them from wasting endless hours searching.

CNN recently reported that some members of the Bush administration are even rumored to have offered a $33,000 reward to find "the Leak."

BUT THE IRONY OF THIS SITUATION is that Congress is mad because this was not an "approved leak."

The legislators are notorious for getting nasty little details about their opponents publicized when it is election time or tattling on who is voting for what bill.

They should not be so quick to jump on this bandwagon when leaks are a daily part of politics.

Instead, legislators should spend more time worrying about the national deficit, finding money for education or, at the very least, learning to balance their checkbooks.

Bush made good call promising reductions in U.S. nuclear arms

By the Daily Vidette
Illinois State University

President Bush has silenced critics who call him indecisive and excessively cautious with his promising new plan for not inconsequential reductions in the U.S. nuclear defense capacity.

The good faith gesture, made in hopes the Soviets would follow suit, is one of the most promising new developments in U.S.-Soviet relations since the advent of glasnost.

Bush's surprise announcement to implement unilateral reductions without prior agreement from the Soviets, coupled with the massive Soviet aid campaign, will hopefully solidify the friendly relationship of the two superpowers. Recent events in the Soviet Union have greatly lessened the need for large-scale nuclear armament.

The threat, that the government used to justify an exorbitant defense budget, has all but evaporated. By all means the defense budget should not be eliminated, however a considerable downsizing of the defense budget would not be inappropriate.

By any standard, the effort to make the first move toward a permanent peace agreement with the Soviets was a wise move. Each country's adamant refusal to reduce arms only after the other has done the same has accomplished a stalemate. It is encouraging to see the United States acting as leader once more.

The plan was also commendable in another respect, it will free up billions of dollars to put toward the domestic problems Bush is known for putting on the back burner. Whether this is a political ploy to appease the critics or not, it will legitimately do what many have been lobbying in favor of for years—take money from the defense budget and put it where the public will appreciate it.

Letters to the Editor

Gun laws take away freedoms; public should try to retain rights

LAST WEEK, THE "largest" massacre occurred in Killeen, Texas.

This was a terrible crime. Not only because of how many people died but because these citizens were unable to defend themselves.

Obviously the police can't be everywhere at once but what could the people have done? Nothing.

Why? Because they are law-abiding citizens and there are laws that prevent people from being able to defend themselves. What laws? Gun laws.

CERTAIN POLITICIANS FEEL that in order to "protect" the public, YOU must give up your rights and freedoms.

This should cause you to be very concerned.

One of these freedoms, on the verge of congressional extinction, is owning a firearm.

Already, California politicians have made a large portion of the state's population felons by outlawing certain firearms.

If the law-abiding citizen was allowed to carry a firearm, how many people do you think the gunman would have been able to kill before someone shot him?

Certainly not 22.

There are currently six states that have concealed weapons licenses available to the public; Florida is one of them.

FLORIDA'S CONCEALED weapons licensing law went into effect October 1, 1987.

A Florida Dept. of Law Enforcement spokesperson and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms has reported that the new law has not increased firearm violence.

A study conducted by the St. Louis University School of Law found that armed citizens were exceedingly responsible in carrying handguns.

Why? Because law-abiding citizens don't break the law.

When the media starts calling for the disarmament of the public over this incident, remember that they are calling to take away your rights and freedoms.

And after you no longer have the ability to defend yourself, what will they want to take away next?

Give it a thought.—Robin M. Hanus, senior in advance tech. studies.

Stone House should remain open for entertaining University guests

THIS LETTER IS in reference to the editorial of October 4, "Stone House Needs Practical, Public Use," and several others over the past month of the same bent.

It never ceases to amaze me that there are still faculty and students (students are forgiven; they were not here when the house was built), that think Stone house is totally occupied by the president or chancellor.

After 20 years of public use of the house for every kind of event imaginable, there are still those bellyaching that the CEO lives in a "mansion." Brian Matmiller's jaundiced reporting of University news does little to dispel that impression.

The house from its inception was to be a place for the University to provide hospitality; hospitality to those who are important to the conduct of University business.

After 20 years of public use there are still those bellyaching that the CEO lives in a "mansion"

—James A. Osberg

That could mean someone from the Stone family, who incidentally paid for the house, or the parents being honored for parents' weekend.

IT MIGHT ALSO include the governor, members of the Legislature or someone else who has input into the funding of the University, either publicly or privately. The residence of the University's chief executive officer is about 1600 square feet, hardly the edifice to power claimed by detractors!!

RATHER THAN turn Stone House into a daycare center or some other use contrary to what the Stone Foundation intended with the gift, perhaps the Board of Trustees could consider leaving the house "an executive residence" without a resident, using the facility for University entertaining as it has been for the past 20 years?

Until January of this year the governor did not reside in the governor's mansion, yet it remained his residence. He lived in his own home and used the mansion when in Springfield and for entertaining guests of state.

That kind of solution would honor the intent of the donor who paid for the home and provide the University with a facility which a "World Class" university should have for honoring its friends.—James A. Osberg, former asst. to the governor for education.

power to make them stay home," said Riyadh Malki, a supporter of the extremist Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine.

He was joined by Ali Abu Hilla, a supporter of the equally radical Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine.

Their remarks shocked mainstream Palestinian leaders working for Palestinian representation at the conference.

"I am really very astonished," said Abdel-Shafi. "I think it is legitimate to have differences in point of view, but it is not legitimate to resort to force."

Malki and Hilla said those backing the talks were out of step with public opinion and were backsliding on earlier commitments to include representatives from Arab East

Jerusalem and displaced Palestinians.

The two later met with Husseini to calm the controversy over their remarks and denied threatening Palestinian delegates with violence.

"We reject the use of violence to resolve conflicts between the Palestinian people and the national forces," they said in a joint statement.

Meanwhile, in the occupied Gaza Strip, the PFLP, the DFLP and the Islamic fundamentalist Hamas movement issued a joint leaflet condemning the peace talks as "aimed at promoting imperialist control and Zionism."

The leaflet asked Gaza residents to turn the coming days into a period of "anger and confrontation" with Israel.

eliminated the 22nd district, which traditionally held the southernmost counties, and split it among three other districts.

The motion to intervene would have preserved most of Southern Illinois as a special interest community, regardless of whether the Democratic, Republican or another map was accepted by the panel.

David Kenney, visiting professor in political science, said although the motion was filed on the day of the deadline, it probably was too late to have an impact on the judges.

He said there is no standard way for the public to have their opinions heard by the panel. Judges are appointed for life to remove them from the political system of pleasing the public for re-election.

Legislators often get letters and phone calls from their constituents when an important decision comes up, but the courts do not work like that, Kenney said.

It generally is considered unethical to try to influence the opinions of a judge, he said.

"We're not supposed to lean on judges, unlike legislators," he said.

getting their financial aid applications filed should have been able to beat the Oct. 18 deadline, Britton said.

Students employees were sent a list of their employers so had not filed financial aid applications Oct. 18 that employment would be terminated.

Oct. 18 was the end of a 30-day extension for student workers who did not have their applications in.

Students who did not get their applications processed by the deadline need to turn in the forms as soon as they are received so they can be given a new work referral.

Until the process is completed, students should not be allowed to work and will not be paid for work done after the final notice, Britton said.

Starfield said.

The United Kingdom ranked high in the category of primary care service but was ranked low for its health indicators, Starfield said.

"The United Kingdom has the lowest per capita spending on health of all the countries studied. However, per capita spending does not guarantee high performance on the health indicators, as the United States by far has the highest level of spending of all the countries," said Starfield, whose study was published in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

In her explanation of the low rankings for the United States, United Kingdom and West

Germany, Starfield said, "access to primary care services may have little impact on health when other social services are underdeveloped and where resources for public education are relatively inadequate."

Other nations in the study were Australia, Belgium, Denmark and Finland.

Signs of much older Sphinx may rewrite history—group

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Signs of ancient rainstorms indicate Egypt's Great Sphinx may be as much as 4,000 years older than currently believed—a discovery that could rewrite the history of civilization, a group of scientists said Tuesday.

The giant stone figure with the body of a lion and the head of a man was believed to have been built around 2500 B.C., but an examination of the rock showed signs of weathering that led researchers to believe the Sphinx was built by a long-vanished civilization at least 2,500 to 4,000 years earlier.

"We don't know who might have made it," said John A. West, an independent Egyptologist who was part of the study team.

"But proof that a civilization capable of creating such a sculpture existed," West said, "even as little as 2,500 years earlier than commonly believed, is to history what the relativity theory was to Victorian physics."

The research group's report was presented this week at the Geological Society of America at the group's annual meeting in San Diego.

The team visited the Sphinx outside of Cairo in April and examined the sandstone believed to have been carved during the reign of Pharaoh Chephren, also known as Pharaoh Khafre, who died in 2494 B.C.

The examination revealed cracks and weathering in the rock of the type usually caused by long periods of rainfall.

The same weathering was not found on other stone structures from the age in the area, including the nearby Great Pyramids.

Scientists believe such rains fell after the Ice Age ended, long before Chephren's reign.

"Since 10,000 B.C., the general trend has been toward ever-increasing aridity, culminating in the present-day Sahara," said Robert M. Schoch, a Boston University geology professor and a member of the expedition.

"Pharaoh Chephren evidently repaired and refurbished the weathered Sphinx around 2500 B.C., but he did not build it," Schoch said.

If a civilization older than the ancient Egyptians built the Sphinx, there could be other relics still to be discovered beneath the desert sand, Schoch said.

Seismograph studies of the ground around the statue indicated channels cut into the sandstone bedrock.

The findings might mean the Sphinx was built on top of an ancient cliff that has since filled in with sand.

Freed hostage Turner arrives to see daughter for first time

WIESBADEN, Germany (UPI) — Jesse Turner, the American hostage freed by Muslim fundamentalists in Lebanon, stepped off a U.S. military plane Tuesday expecting soon to set eyes for the first time on a 4-year-old daughter he has never seen.

About 300 U.S. military staff and families cheered as Turner, 44, of Boise, Idaho, arrived at the Wiesbaden military medical facility aboard a Black Hawk helicopter that flew him from the nearby Rhein Main U.S. Air Base.

He was released Monday by the Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine after nearly five years' captivity and was immediately taken to Damascus, Syria, where he was turned over to U.S. officials.

Turner, looking upbeat and relaxed, smiled and waved as he walked into the hospital, accompanied by U.S. Ambassador Robert Kimmitt and his wife. Banners hung from the hospital balconies, including one reading, "Welcome Home, Jesse 'the Idahoan' Turner" and another urging him to "Keep the Faith."

U.S. officials said they expected his Lebanese-born wife, Badr, would arrive from Boise during the night with the couple's daughter, Joanne, who was born five months after Turner was kidnapped in Beirut on Jan. 24, 1987.

Mrs. Turner gave birth to the girl five months after her husband was kidnapped Jan. 24, 1987 in Beirut, where he was a professor of mathematics and computer science.

Infant mortality rises 400 percent in Iraq since war

LONDON (UPI) — Infant mortality in Iraq has risen 380 percent since the start of the Persian Gulf crisis as the ruined economy struggles to cope with shortages of food, medicine and clean water, an international team of academics reported Tuesday.

An 87-member team from British, Dutch and U.S. universities said it visited Iraq's 30 largest cities, as well as rural areas, and documented a breakdown of basic services that has sent child mortality and malnutrition levels spiraling to record highs since the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait on Aug. 2, 1990.

"Unless Iraq quickly obtains food, medicine and spare parts, millions of Iraqis will continue to experience malnutrition and disease," the report said. "Children by the tens of thousands will remain in jeopardy. Thousands will die."

More than one in 10 children now die before age 5, nearly quadruple the rate in 1990, the report said.

"Before the Gulf crisis, the mortality rate for children under 5 years of age was 27.8 deaths per thousand live births," the report said. "Since the Gulf crisis, the under-5 mortality rate has increased to 104.4 deaths per thousand live births."

"It is estimated that the mortality rate of children under 5 years of age is 380 percent greater today than before the onset of the Gulf crisis," the report added.

The Iraqi economy has been devastated by the war and sanctions, the report said. Iraq's public services have deteriorated and its people are "ill, undernourished, unemployed, impoverished and demoralized," the scientists reported.

Basic physical damage from military attacks, the loss of oil revenues has driven wages down and sent prices skyrocketing.

"In terms of private incomes, the incidence of poverty in Iraq is greater than in India," the report said. "The food price index has risen by 1,500 to 2,000 percent. Correspondingly, real earnings have fallen to less than 7 percent of their pre-crisis level."

Although the report said the public food distribution system in Iraq is "comprehensive, equitable, efficient and (as far as we can tell) free from corruption," the food it provides falls far short of the amounts needed.

Nearly 29 percent of the 2,902 children studied in the survey were malnourished.

If the statistic were applied to all 3.3 million children under age 5 in Iraq, researchers estimated some 900,000 children could be malnourished.

Professor says Mideast needs partition, peace

By Katie Fitzgerald
General Assignment Writer

Peace in the Middle East will be possible only if Israel and Palestine are granted statehood, said an international law professor at the University of Illinois School of Law.

"Generally, I think peace will be possible but only on a two state proposal," said law professor Francis Boyle.

Boyle will lecture at 7 p.m. Wednesday, in the Student Center Auditorium on the way Israel, Palestine and surrounding states can build a peaceful relationship.

He also will discuss issues facing Palestinians in the upcoming Middle East Peace Conference Oct. 30 and will review the elements of the Palestinian Liberation Organization peace initiative of the two state proposal in relation to the Middle East Peace Conference, Boyle said.

Haitem El-Zubri, General Union of Palestine Students president, said Boyle generally does not have the same mainstream view of the Palestine-Israel conflict as the media.

"We feel Israel is portrayed in the media as being the underdog. That is simply a biased representation," El-Zubri said.

The program is directed to people outside Palestinian interest groups, El-Zubri said.

"Our objective is to increase understanding of the Middle East Crisis in the SIU community," El-Zubri said.

Boyle is the Human Rights Research Foundation vice president and serves on the Palestine Human Rights Campaign board of directors. He is on the United Nations committee on Inalienable Rights of Palestinians.

He has served as legal adviser to the Palestine Liberation Organization in the creation of Palestinian statehood proposal.

He received his law degree magna cum laude from Harvard Law School in 1976. His graduate work was concentrated on political science.

The program is co-sponsored by the General Union of Palestinian Students, the Committee for Peace in the Middle East, the Mid-American Peace Project and the Peace Coalition of Southern Illinois.

Carbondale, Bulgaria to unite to share ideas

By Fatima Janvekar
General Assignment Writer

Carbondale and Bulgaria are tying the knot between two communities through a program that officials say means future success for both.

"I am very optimistic about my presence in Carbondale—the presence of Bulgarians here is a guarantee for the future success of this country and Bulgaria," said Ognian Pishev, Bulgarian ambassador to the United States. "Our cooperation will always help the future of democracy in the world. It will be an experience we should all try to share in."

Pishev and Vladimir Ossenov, Bulgaria's First Secretary for Science and Technology, took part in a forum last week at SIUC.

"SIUC is a truly international university. This exchange of young people, which we want to increase in the next few years, and the possibilities of U.S. faculty coming to Bulgaria will encourage the cooperation and understanding we are looking forward to so much," Ossenov said.

Ossenov is based in the Bulgarian embassy in Washington, D.C., where he oversees scientific and technological cooperation between the United States and Bulgaria.

"Bulgarian culture has a lot to give to the world. It is the ideal place for the study of music. It is reputed to have some of the world's most famous musicians, and its institutes excel in the studies of diverse fields—humanity, history, architecture and Slavic studies," the ambassador said.

The University has been awarded a $112,000 grant from the U.S. Information Agency to sponsor a conference in Carbondale in spring 1992. The grant would bring 15 Bulgarian professors and scholars to Carbondale.

"The primary reason they have been invited to Carbondale is to discuss the role of SIUC in the development of the new government in Bulgaria and the constitution of the new government," said Dick Kuehl, research projects specialist at the Office of International Development on campus.

This is a follow-on award, acting as an extension to the one given for a meeting in Bulgaria last spring, Kuehl said.

"Through these conferences, we aim to help our people at SIUC understand the environment and the concerns of the situation currently going on in Bulgaria, and the center will help us to analyze and understand the process of democratization there," he said.

The Bulgarian state was founded in 1689 and still has very strong Greek and Roman influence.

Plovdiv, the second largest city in Bulgaria, was founded by Alexander the Great's father.

"Our folk culture and tradition are very important in the modern world," Kuehl said.

Bulgaria also has a number of scholars in the field of science, especially mathematics and physics.

The ambassador said he believes the combined effort of the United States and Bulgaria could lead to very interesting projects.

"Europe is the most interesting part of the world right now, with much exciting activity occurring there and all the eyes of the world are centered on it," Pishev said.

A great deal of direct and indirect contribution on the part of Bulgaria can take place to enhance development of the European continent, he said.

Ossenov said more opportunities exist for Bulgaria now that it was open to the world.

"We now want to live in the world, but first we have to reform our system. One of the first reforms is education—when you are beginning something, you must first start from the education system," Ossenov said.

"Bulgaria has always been a farming society, but the people lack information and knowledge about modern technology to help them in their lives. We have a lot to learn from the United States in this respect. Education opens us to new ideas, and we are grateful to SIUC that it started exchange programs when it did, never mind the difficulties," Ossenov said.

This University has been involved with Bulgaria since the 1980s, when the late Horace Jacobini, SIUC political science professor, spent a year in the country on a Fulbright exchange. Several professors have gone on exchange programs since then.

The University also has had one major project with Bulgaria during the past four years.

"We here at SIUC are working on a proposal that will initiate and establish a Center for Law, Policy Studies and Culture in Bulgaria," Kuehl said.

"The ambassador has been invited to discuss the proposal with the faculty. This will allow him to meet face-to-face with faculty members who will be actively involved in each stage of development of the project," he said.

The center would need financial support from both the United States and Bulgaria, and would promote faculty and student exchanges, as well as joint research projects, Kuehl said.

In May last spring, six law and faculty members met with their Bulgarian counterparts in Varna for a conference on the law and judicial procedures.

Television contest to zoom in on financial aid awareness

By Sarah Anderson
General Assignment Writer

The Illinois Student Assistance Commission is urging television and video production students to enter a television public service announcement contest to promote next February as Financial Aid Awareness Month.

"We are offering students an opportunity to showcase their talents and to win a prize," said Ruth Slottag, a public information officer with the Illinois Student Assistance Commission.

The contest winner receives air play for the message and $500.

"Our industry is very competitive. What helps a student to compete when getting a job is a portfolio. To produce a public service announcement that gets aired will let them stand out among the competition," said Scott Hodgson, assistant professor of radio and television and a producer-director.

The 30-second commercial should promote a toll-free hot line available February 10-14 to answer questions about financial aid for a college or post-secondary vocational school.

"When promoting the hot line, students should keep in mind that the target audience is junior and senior high school students and their parents," Slottag said.

The contest is sponsored by the Illinois Student Assistance Commission and the Illinois Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators.

The two organizations have set up criteria that public service announcement entries must follow.

"The message has to include information essential to the hot line including the date, message and subject as well as meet broadcast specifications," Slottag said. "Students can submit a 10- or 15-second message if they so desire."

Students can call the Illinois Student Assistance Commission at 217-785-8721 for information. The deadline for entries is Nov. 30.

Heart disease leading killer for women—report

By Jeremy Finley
General Assignment Writer

Heart disease is the No. 1 killer among women this year, leading all forms of cancer, according to a report by the American Heart Association.

The American Heart Association reported that heart and blood vessel diseases claim about 500,000 women's lives every year, while all types of cancer cause nearly 227,000 fatalities.

Jeanette L. Miller, a registered dietitian, said women are more susceptible to heart diseases during their post menopause years than men.

"It is important for people to be aware of heart diseases," Miller said. "People should know their family health history, especially their immediate family health history."

Medical advances and changing lifestyles are major reasons for the decrease of death rates for women from 1979 to 1987. The rates of death for coronary heart disease declined 20 percent, strokes declined 26 percent and all cardiovascular diseases declined more than 14 percent.

"If people would just basically take better care of themselves, the cases of heart diseases would drop. People who are active, have a good diet of low fat, and control stress in their lives are less susceptible to have heart diseases," Miller said.

Certain risk factors for heart diseases can be controlled, according to the American Heart Association.

The most preventable cause of death and the most significant risk factor is smoking.

Temporary changes and extra strain is put on the heart from cigarette smoking. Smoking also causes a shortage of oxygen to the heart.

Women who smoke are more than twice as likely to have a heart attack than non-smoking women. When women smokers use oral contraceptives, they also increase their risk of having a heart attack or a stroke.

Black women have higher cardiovascular death rates than white women, primarily because black women tend to have higher blood pressure levels.

High blood pressure is another risk factor, and half of all women older than 55 have high blood pressure. Many women develop high blood pressure during pregnancy.

High blood pressure can be controlled by exercising regularly, eating healthy foods and limiting the amount of sodium intake.

Atherosclerosis, a process that happens because of high blood cholesterol, slows blood flow or blocks blood vessels and can cause either a heart attack or a stroke.

Common student foods transform into healthy meals with little effort

By Kate Zager
Wellness Center

No time to cook and no money to shop for healthy foods are just two of the challenges of independent living for students.

Wondering how to stretch meager funds into a week or two of sustenance can even make a trip to the grocery store stressful for many students. But eventually they return from the store with bags full of food from the new four basic food groups: peanut butter, macaroni and cheese, ramen noodles and carbonated sugar water.

Agreed, at 25 to 30 cents a box, macaroni and cheese and ramen noodles are hard deals to beat. After all, a student only has to know how to boil water to prepare them, and the comfort brought on by a peanut butter and jelly sandwich, or a tummy full of warm, cheesy or salty noodles is second only to a mother's kiss.

To Your Health

It also is true that these cheap, convenient foods, on their own, are high in fat and sodium. When creatively balanced with other foods, however, they can contribute to a healthy diet.

For example, a tablespoon of peanut butter on its own has about 90 calories, 70 percent of which come from fat. Add two pieces of whole wheat bread, a tablespoon of jam and a glass of 1 percent milk and the numbers change to 390 calories with fat contributing to only 28 percent.

This meal also has 42 percent of the protein and a third of the calcium needed daily by a typical adult and more fiber than a bowl of raisin bran.

According to package directions, it takes 4 tablespoons of butter to make macaroni and cheese. This translates into a tablespoon of butter for a 3/4 cup serving after it is prepared. If two tablespoons of butter are used, the fat calories are cut in half and the taste remains the same.

Add a half cup frozen broccoli to macaroni and cheese, and you get half the vitamin C you need daily, more fiber, potassium, vitamin A and complex carbohydrates and the cost of the meal is still under a quarter.

Ramen noodles, a staple for most college students, have 400 calories and 16 grams of fat in a two serving bag. With a half cup of peas and 3 ounces of tuna, turkey or chicken, this meal gets only 26 percent of its calories from fat and contributes 98 percent of the protein and 30 percent of the iron needed daily by a typical adult.

The Campbell Soup Company has also come out with a "low fat" ramen noodle with only 2 grams of fat a package.

Husband, wife classical duo to perform at music festival

By William Ragan
Entertainment Writer

Internationally known classical musicians Mary Louise Boehm and Kees Kooper will perform in a three-recital chamber music festival beginning tonight.

Boehm and Kooper, married for 25 years, met 30 years ago at Kooper's violin recital in Paris.

"His accompanist got sick in concert, and I was the only pianist who was also sharing the bill," Boehm said.

Kooper said he instantly established a good working relationship with Boehm.

"It's rare that you find another musician who is on the same wavelength as you," Kooper said.

The two musicians were married five years later and have been performing together ever since.

"We enjoy playing together most of all," Boehm said.

Kooper, a Holland native, began taking lessons in violin and piano at age 5. While attending high school, he decided to become a professional violinist.

Kooper studied with master violinist Oscar Back, and five years later he became a prize winner in the International Queen Elizabeth of Belgium Violin Contest.

He immigrated to the United States in 1951 and attended Northwestern University in Evanston, where he received his master's degree.

Mary Louise Boehm was born in Iowa to a musical family and began playing the piano at age 4. At 10, she was winning regional and national contests, and at 17, she made her debut as a soloist in Chicago at Orchestra Hall.

Boehm completed her studies in Europe under the guidance of master pianist Walter Gieseking, after winning Fulbright and Woolley Fellowships.

Boehm said their apprenticeships had much to do with their sound today.

"I was concert caliber. I had to prove that to (Gieseking)," Boehm said. "He wouldn't have accepted me if I wasn't out playing concerts."

Boehm is Artist-in-Residence at the Museum of the American Piano, and Kooper recently was First Concertmaster of the Netherlands Philharmonic Orchestra.

Donald Beattie, associate professor in the School of Music and head of the SIUC Beethoven Society, said Boehm and Kooper are two of the most talented musicians in the music world.

"You can't find artists more versatile than they are, as chamber musicians and teachers," Beattie said.

Boehm and Kooper will perform a broad range of pieces at 8 p.m. tonight in Shryock Auditorium, ranging from traditional pieces such as Liszt's "Hungarian Rhapsody" to African-American composer William Grant Still's "Suite for Violin and Piano," a suite that uses African, blues and jazz in a classical format.

The festival continues at 8 p.m. Thursday, when the duo are joined by SIUC staff and students in a recital that includes pieces by Mozart and Dvorak.

The festival will conclude at 8 p.m. Friday with a concert consisting entirely of Beethoven pieces. Soprano Mara Rice from Du Quoin will join Boehm and Kooper on several vocal pieces, including selections from "Christ on the Mount of Olives" and the opera "Fidelio."

Tickets to the Boehm/Kooper Chamber Music Festival are available at the door and cost $3 for the general public and $2 for students. A special 3-recital package is available for $7.50 for the public and $4.50 for students.

New literacy council member does good for region, coordinator says

By Teri Lynn Carlock
General Assignment Writer

Betty Neely, project director of the literacy support project at the Shawnee Library System in Carrierville, is one of the first individuals to represent Southern Illinois on the Illinois Literacy Council.

Rose Hoshiko, coordinator of library services in the Shawnee Library System, said Neely has done an outstanding job as director of the library's literacy program.

"Betty has been responsible for the literacy support project since 1985 and has done quite a bit for Southern Illinois," she said.

Neely takes part in workshops for volunteers who are being trained to tutor adults with literacy problems, and she also helps teach at some of the workshops. Most recently she was the organizer of the sixth annual LiteracyFest at the University Mall in Carbondale.

Neely was notified of her acceptance into the council in September after submitting her resume about a year ago. Her resume was approved by Secretary of State George Ryan and Gov. Jim Edgar before her admittance was final.

Neely said Southern Illinois needs a voice on the council.

"The needs of Southern Illinois are different than the needs up north," she said.

Neely said she plans on raising the issue of providing transportation for students who are being tutored.

"I would like to help people find rides to their tutoring sessions and also provide child care for them," she said.

The committee should be able to make some new strides and work out some of the state's recurring literacy problems, Neely said.

"I am hoping I will get a fuller picture of the needs of the state as a whole and not be so self-centered towards Southern Illinois," she said.

The Literacy Council, which will be chaired by Ryan, is responsible for recommending policy and legislation on the way to best serve adults with basic literacy skills and to promote coordination among literacy interests in Illinois.

The council's agenda will include workplace literacy, coordination of state efforts, family literacy, grant funding and private and public partnerships in literacy efforts.

Jan Grimes, communications assistant for the secretary of state's literacy office, said heavy concentration will be placed on certain programs.

"We anticipate that there will be some business and labor workplace literacy programs developed by our members this year," she said.

Council members include representatives from libraries, businesses, experts in reading and volunteers.

Some individuals are not representing a business or agency, but were recruited based on their outstanding work for literacy in the community.

Representatives from the Department of Public Aid, the Department of Children and Family Services and the Illinois State Board of Education will attend the council's meetings to introduce topics for discussion and will receive feedback from members of the council.

The council will convene for the first time Oct. 30 in Chicago.

Report: IQ level affects frequency of juvenile crimes

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Juvenile criminals with lower IQs are likely to commit more repeat crimes than their smarter counterparts, a University of Florida study has found.

"These results suggest that if we can raise IQ scores in the schools, we may be able to shorten some of the criminal careers of kids who go down that path," said Patrick Gartin, an associate at Florida's Center for Studies in Criminology and Law.

Gartin and co-researcher Lauren Dundes studied juvenile police records and other data on 987 youths through age 17.

The 487 males and 500 females in the study were born to low-income black women who participated in a prenatal project at Pennsylvania Hospital in Philadelphia between 1959 and 1962.

Police reported that 177, or 18 percent, of the youths committed at least one criminal offense, for which 140 of them were arrested.

These youths generated a total of 445 police contacts, with 334 incidences resulting in arrest, Gartin said.

The study found that IQ scores do not go so far as to predict who will commit first crimes.

There were no significant differences in IQ scores between the 177 youths with criminal offenses and the 810 without, he said.

The researchers, however, found a strong link between lower IQ scores and the tendency to become repeat criminals.

"For kids who do offend, our study found that IQ scores predict how many criminal offenses they have," Gartin said. "The kids with one offense tend to have higher IQs than those with three or four offenses."

Police Blotter

John M. McLauskey, 19, of Zeigler, told police his car was broken into at 10:09 p.m. Oct. 17 while it was parked in a parking lot in the 100 block of N. Washington St.

He said an in-dash stereo, an amplifier and speakers worth a total of $409.95 were taken from the car.

Someone allegedly started two chairs and some paper on fire in the stairwell between the 13th and 14th floors of Mac Smith Hall.

The fire department responded to an alarm, but two residents who saw the fire put it out before fire fighters got there.

A building at 2608 W. Murphysboro Road that houses Williams Construction, TNM Newspaper Agency and Frame Shop allegedly was broken into between 9 a.m. Oct. 19 and 5:10 a.m. Oct. 20.

A television, portable stereo, clock and about 2,000 baseball cards were taken. The loss is valued at $885.

Lloyd Glasser, 38, of 2511 S. Illinois Ave., told police his trailer was broken into between 8:15 p.m. Oct. 18 and 1:45 a.m. Oct. 19. He said a shotgun and fishing equipment worth a total of $150 were taken.

Cafeteria worker Enrico C. DeVille, 36, of 303 W. Willow St., was arrested at 7:31 p.m. Oct. 18 in connection with stealing fruit pies from Trueblood cafeteria.

Cafeteria worker Thomas E. Martin, 60, of 29 Candy Lane in Murphysboro, was arrested Oct. 18 for stealing lettuce, tomato and meat patties from Trueblood.

Both men were released on recognizance and are scheduled to appear in court Oct. 28.

Wyche angry with officials after Bengals drop seventh ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (UPI) — Cincinnati Coach Sam Wyche complained bitterly about the officiating in Monday night's game against the Buffalo Bills. But it was the Jim Kelly to James Lofton combination that did the most damage to the Bengals.

Wyche blasted the officiating after his team was soundly whipped by the Bills, 35-16. The victory boosted Buffalo's record to 7-1 while the Bengals fell to 0-7. "It wasn't fair on our guys," Wyche said. "I must've had a half a dozen Buffalo players come over to me afterwards and apologize for the officiating."

Wyche was charged with a penalty when he came onto the field to protest a non-call. He felt his quarterback Boomer Esiason was hit late when running out of bounds on a play in the third quarter.

Wyche's frustration at watching the Bengals lose their seventh straight game was understandable. His defense just couldn't stop Kelly once he got untracked. The Bengals intercepted Kelly three times in the first 11 minutes, but the Bills' quarterback finally found the range and connected on five TD passes, including two long TD passes to Lofton.

Lofton took advantage of the inexperience of rookie cornerback

Richard Fain to score on TD passes of 74 and 48 yards.

"When you've got a veteran in James Lofton and a young guy going against him, you have to go that way," Kelly said. "I wasn't looking that way all the time, but I have so much confidence in James, that you have to go to him."

The Bengals scored first with the aid of a Buffalo turnover. Kelly's second pass of the game bounced off the shoulder pads of Keith McKellar and into the arms of Rickey Dixon, who returned it 15 yards to the Buffalo 29. Eight plays later, Jim Breech connected from 32 yards out for a field goal that made it 3-0.

Dickerson embarrassed at Indianapolis' 0-8 start

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Running back Eric Dickerson says he is embarrassed by the 0-8 start of the Indianapolis Colts this season and predicted he and other players could be traded.

"This is just embarrassing," he said. "I don't know if a lot of these guys realize it, but we're 0-8 and if things don't get better a lot of these guys are going to be out of here, including me and probably some of the other players. I don't think they know what's at stake."

Dickerson, who has missed the last two games with a hamstring injury, said he is fearful other teams won't be interested in obtaining players the Colts might want to trade or release.

"Nobody's going to want any of them," he said. "I mean I wouldn't want one of them. I just wouldn't."

Dickerson, who maintained a low profile earlier this season, said many of the players "look at this as a fun game and just come and get a paycheck."

"I think a lot of these guys just don't give a damn and that's the problem," Dickerson said. "And honestly, I think I care too much. I think that's one of my problems."

"We're 28th in the league in rushing," he said, "but I'm like a caged up animal... there's nothing I can do. They say there are holes, but there are no holes. There's no place to run."

"Some of the problem is that guys are hurt, but a lot of times guys just don't know what they're doing," he said. "They just don't know their assignments."

The Colts, he said, simply don't have the personnel to match up with other teams.

"As it stands now," Dickerson said, "we're playing with a lot of backup guys against a lot of starters. It's like the third team going up against the first team."

Pittsburgh pays for series wager by sweeping up Atlanta's streets

ATLANTA (UPI) — Two members of the Pittsburgh City Council started sweeping downtown Atlanta streets Tuesday, paying off a bet made with Atlanta officials on the National League Championship Series.

Pittsburgh councilmen Bernard Regan and Jake Millionnes picked up leaves, cigarette butts, crumpled newspapers and other garbage. All because they bet on the Pirates to beat Atlanta for the National League pennant. The Braves won the best-of-seven series, 4-3, taking the last two games in Pittsburgh to gain the World Series against Minnesota.

"We never planned on this, but we are here to fulfill our debt," said Millionnes, as he pushed a trash vacuum. "I must say, your streets are pretty clean here."

In September, two Pittsburgh council members challenged Atlanta council members Mary Davis and Bill Campbell to a bet in which the loser would clean up the winner's streets.

Bird's agent: Pact not yet signed

BOSTON (UPI) — The agent for Boston Celtics' forward Larry Bird disputed a published report Tuesday that Bird has agreed to a two-year contract extension.

However, he did say that negotiations for a new contract are under way and hopes to have one signed before the start of the regular season.

Bob Woolf, who represents Bird, said he is having conversations with Celtics' management about extending Bird's contract which is in its final year. But added that nothing has been decided.

"Everybody involved is receptive to the idea but nothing has been finalized," said Woolf. "We would certainly like to get this done before the season started because Larry wouldn't want this hanging over his head when he wants to concentrate on playing."

According to the Boston Globe, Bird accepted a two-year extension that will take him through the 1993-94 season.

Bird, who is in Los Angeles for Tuesday night's game against the Lakers, was asked Monday night whether he had agreed to a contract extension. The Boston Herald said his reply was, "Uh...not that I know of."

It was just four months ago that Bird's basketball future was in question following back surgery. However, Bird has apparently made a quick recovery and has looked good in the preseason.

"One of the reasons everyone is interested in the extension is that Larry is playing so well," said Woolf.

"Larry loves basketball. I would sign him to a 20-year extension if I could."

Bird, who turns 35 in December, is playing this season on a contract he signed in October 1988.

He will be paid $2.2 million in salary this season, as well as a signing bonus of $4.87 million that was deferred until this year.

Bird is recovering from surgery performed to repair a bulging disc, a compressed nerve root and a congenital narrowing of a spinal canal. The back problems caused him to miss 22 regular-season games last year, as well as a pair of playoff outings.

Carroll, who also is a University scuba instructor, said SIUC scuba classes work with the scuba club to provide the best possible training. Hobbie added he thinks the instruction available at SIUC is exceptional.

"I think SIUC is probably the best place to get certified because you have a whole semester to learn everything," Hobbie said. "Whereas if you take the course somewhere else, they usually do it in two or three weeks and you get very limited pool time."

He said the class meets four times a week—twice in the classroom and twice in the pool.

"You get more hours than you would anywhere else and you get more information," he said.

The Scuba Club will not take just anyone, Hobbie said, members must be certified and meet the special specifications of the club.

"Members that were not certified at SIUC get tested before we let them be part of the club," he said. "We test their underwater skills and their scuba knowledge before they can use our equipment. We try to stress education."

Besides use of the pool and a strip mine lake in Pickneyville, members can go on any of the diving trips organized by the club throughout the year.

The biggest trip of the year is the one the club takes to the Bahamas. It includes a week-long cruise with diving opportunities not available in the Midwest.

"It's one of the best trips you can go on," Hobbie said. "You're on a boat the whole time and you get three dives a day. It costs a little more, but you get your money's worth per dive."

Carroll says diving anywhere is an experience that will not be forgotten.

"It's a different world under water being surrounded by the fish and the coral," he said. "If you have never done it before, you should try it because it's an experience you will never forget."

easy winner over Ozzie Smith of St. Louis and Johnson at shortstop. Santiago topped Houston's Craig Biggio for the catching position.

Rijo, who won 15 games and compiled a 2.51 ERA, was a landslide winner over Dennis Martinez of Montreal for the right-handed pitcher's spot. Smith missed by only two votes of being a unanimous choice for relief pitcher. Mitch Williams of Philadelphia and Bill Landrum of Pittsburgh each received a vote.

Shortstop Cal Ripken Jr. of the Baltimore Orioles was the only unanimous choice on the American League team, but Detroit first baseman Cecil Fielder missed by one vote of being a unanimous selection. Frank Thomas of Chicago got the other vote for first base.

Thomas did receive the majority of votes for designated hitter and was selected to the team in that position.

Others named to the AL squad were second baseman Julio Franco of Texas; third baseman Wade Boggs of Boston; outfielders Jose Canseco of Oakland, Ken Griffey Jr. of Seattle and Joe Carter of Toronto; catcher Mickey Tettleton of Detroit; right-handed pitcher Roger Clemens of Boston; left-handed pitcher Jim Abbott of California and reliever Bryan Harvey of California.

"It is a great honor for her, but we are all honored because the whole team has been recognized by having five of eight awards. It really makes me happy."

Locke said the honor shows how hard Simpson and the team work.

"We went to win, but split our first two Gateway matches," Locke said. "We have set out all along to be one of the better teams in the conference, but we were ranked only fifth in the preseason poll."

"We have geared every practice and every match trying to prove we are better than fifth, and we still have a few more weeks to prove it."

The team will compete in a non-conference tournament this weekend to gear up for the rest of the Gateway season, Locke said.

"We have another week to strengthen what we have," she said. "We cannot feel like everything is over since we lost one match."

The spikers travel to Kalamazoo, Mich., to battle in Western Michigan and Maryland in the Western Michigan Invitational.
